Fr. Tomasz's Weekly Reflection

The readings today present us with a paradox – one that lies at the very heart of the Christian life. To follow Christ is to walk a path that often contradicts the logic of the world. It is to find strength in weakness, joy in suffering, and victory in what appears to be defeat. This is not a contradiction of confusion, but of divine wisdom – a wisdom that turns the world upside down so that it might be set right.

In the Gospel of Luke, Jesus sends out seventy-two disciples, not with weapons or wealth, but with His authority. They return rejoicing, not because they were admired or applauded, but because “even the demons are subject to us because of your name.” The world sees power in domination; Christ gives power to heal, to cast out evil, to proclaim peace. The disciples are warned not to rejoice in their success, but in the fact that their names are written in heaven. Their mission is not about status – it is about salvation.

Saint Paul, writing to the Galatians, declares, “May I never boast except in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ.” The cross – an instrument of torture and death – becomes the Christian’s glory. The world boasts in strength, in achievement, in self-sufficiency. But Paul boasts in the cross, because it is there that love triumphed over sin, and life conquered death. To follow Christ is to embrace this contradiction: that in dying, we live; in surrendering, we are victorious.

Isaiah speaks of a Jerusalem that will finally know peace and comfort, where tears will be transformed into joy. This is not the Jerusalem of political stability or military might, but the Jerusalem of God’s promise – a city where God’s people are consoled like children in their mother’s arms. The Psalm echoes this joy: “Shout joyfully to God, all the earth... Come and see the works of God.” Even the tears of the past become part of the song of praise. The world may see only sorrow, but faith sees the seeds of joy.

To follow Christ is to live in this tension. We are called to be in the world, but not of it. We are sent like lambs among wolves, yet we carry the peace of Christ. We are marked by the cross, yet we are filled with resurrection hope. The Christian life is not a retreat from reality, but a deeper engagement with it – armed not with worldly weapons, but with the Gospel.

Let us not be afraid of this contradiction. Let us embrace it as the path of true discipleship. Like the seventy-two, let us go forth with the authority of Christ. Like Paul, let us boast in the cross. Like Jerusalem, let us receive the comfort of God. And like the psalmist, let us cry out with joy – not because life is easy, but because God is faithful.

May our lives be a living contradiction to the world while being a testimony that in Christ, weakness becomes strength, sorrow becomes joy, and death becomes life.

STEWARDSHIP CORNER

In today's Gospel, we hear Jesus inviting his disciples to be evangelizers. "The harvest is abundant," Jesus says. But those who are willing to invite others to a deeper relationship with the Lord are few. Good stewards who are willing to witness their Catholic faith to others know they are "like lambs among wolves." They are encouraged to be gentle, patient and loving, knowing they may face rejection and even fierce opposition. Jesus invites us to be better stewards of our faith, to give positive, courageous, joyful witness to others who have turned away from their relationship with him. Is there someone we should be reaching out to this week?

Church History: Constantine (Last Week) Church History: The Church Fathers The Church in the Middle Ages (Next Week)

- Several men became known as the Fathers of the Church because “they lived in the formative age of Christianity, when seminal understandings were forged about many aspects of belief and practice. The Fathers’ writings about the Christian faith would profoundly influence the entire subsequent history of the Church.”
- The Fathers of the Church wanted to make sure that people were not falling into error about the faith, and so throughout the history of the Church, dogmas have been defined, which we are required to believe.
- The Creeds were one way to remember the beliefs of Christianity.
- St. Jerome translated the Bible into Latin, and this translation was called the “Vulgate.”
- St. Athanasius was the first to solidify the 27 books of the New Testament.
- “Christians realized quite early that the Evangelists and Apostles did not provide a detailed exposition of every aspect of their faith. Rather, their writings were an embryo or seed, containing the whole of divine revelation but subject to gradual unfolding.”
- St. Ignatius of Antioch emphasized that Christ has a human and a divine nature, that he is both a man and God.
- The Arian heresy said that Jesus is a creature of God, but not God. St. Athanasius refuted this belief.
- The Council of Nicaea in 325 specified that Jesus is equally God with God the Father.
- Basil of Caesarea, Gregory of Nyssa, and Gregory Nazianzen became known as the Cappadocian Fathers, and they affirmed that Jesus is both fully human and fully divine. They also explained how the Trinity was one being with three natures
- St. Cyril of Alexandria upheld that Mary is “Theotokos,” or the Mother of God.
- St. Irenaeus and Clement of Alexandria “taught that the divine image in man has been tarnished but not destroyed by Adam’s sin and that Christ shed His Blood in order to ransom mankind from the devil.”
- The greatest Latin Father of the Church was St. Augustine of Hippo, son of St. Monica. After a dramatic conversion to Christianity, his Confessions greatly influenced Christian thought.
- St. John Chrysostom was also an important Church Father.

Eucharistic Miracle Spotlight

ETTISWIL, SWITZERLAND, 1447

On May 23, 1447, Anna Vogtli stole a Eucharistic Host from the church of Ettiswel. As soon as she tried to leave the church property, the Host became too heavy to hold. Unable to carry it forward or backward, she dropped it by a fence near the church which was covered in nettles.

Margaret Schulmeister, a young swineherd, found the Host after she neared the place where it had fallen and her animals didn't want to go near it. Two men passing by on horses saw the Host on the ground, which had been divided into seven sections. Six of the sections were grouped together in a form like a flower with light surrounding them.

The priest arrived on the scene, and made to pick up the pieces of the Host to return them to the church.

He was able to pick up the six pieces, but when he went to pick up the seventh, it sunk into the ground and disappeared. The priest interpreted this as a sign to build a chapel over the spot.

The other six sections were kept in the church of Ettiswel, and many came to venerate them and witnessed miracles.

Saint Benedict

Feast: July 11th

Patron of students and Europe

Quick Facts

- The twin brother of St. Scholastica
- Born in 480, and was educated in Rome.
- Became a monk because he didn't want to fall to the vices of his fellow students.
- Founded a monastery in Monte Cassino. His monastery was much larger than previous communities, and he was revolutionary in the development of monastic communities.
- His beliefs and instructions on religious life were compiled into the Rule of St. Benedict.
- He advocated for the importance and power of rhetoric to promote God, and that God's words in Scripture were the most powerful.
